GOVERNMENT ST., - VICTORIA.

BIG BEAR.

The Fugitive who is now Troubling Gen. Middleton.

Big Bear, the chief who is giving Middleton so much trouble, is a plain Cree, a native of the Carleton region, and about sixty years of age. He is of short stature thin and old looking. His appearance is anything but impressive. He speaks with a loud voice, but is short of breath, and is not an orator by any means. About twenty years ago he removed from Carleton to Pitt, and became the head man of a small band of his relatives who resided at Pitt, numbering about twelve tents, or perhaps twenty men. He never was recognized as a chief until after Treaty Six was made. Ever since he was frequently employed by the Hudson Bay Company as a buffalo hunter, and had the reputation of being a good Indian. His band, however, were generally rascals, the greatest being his nephew, named Little Poplar. During a famine which occurred thirteen years ago, caused by the buffalo leaving for the south and the Indians being unable to follow them, they began to kill the H. B. cattle, but were prevented from continuing the practice through the efforts of Big Bear. He and his band seldom engaged in war, but they were notorious for stealing horses from the Blackfeet. He was thought to be rather cowardly. On one occasion four Crees were attacked opposite Fort Pitt by a large band of Blackfeet, while Big Bear was in the fort with eight men. He refused to go to their assistance. The four Crees, however, succeeded in escaping. On several other occasions his actions showed that his courage was not of the highest order. At the making of Treaty No. 6, in 1876, Big Bear refused to accept the terms offered to and accepted by the rest. He wanted to see first how the promises made by the government would be carried out. Pending a decision he removed to Cypress hills, where he remained for six or seven years, gathering a large number of discontented spirits around him each year. Between frequent spats with the Blackfeet and incursions to the States his men became much more expert than formerly in the art of war, and he came to be looked upon as a big chief, equal in importance to Pie-a-pot. At last circumstances, in the shape of few buffalo and many United States troops, coupled with profuse promises from the Indian department, induced Big Bear to return to his old stamping ground near Pitt, some two years ago. Although he took treaty money, he refused to go on a reserve, always having an excuse ready. During the winter before last he freighted one trip from Pitt to Edgonton. He always kept moving about, and fomented discontent wherever he went, which the management of the Indian department made easy, especially among the Fort Pitt Indians, who never had a good reputation, and of whom he seems to have secured control.

From a Canadian Standpoint.

The Chicago Times, speaking of railways, says the Montreal Witness is taking full advantage of its monopoly of railway transportation from the United States border into Manitoba and the Northwest to prevent as far as it can traffic and travel by that route to Manitoba and the Northwest. Its object is, of course, to make Canadian and Eastern traffic and travel take its route around the north shore of Lake Superior or its steamers up Lake Huron and Superior to Port Arthur, and thence by its railway to Winnipeg. To accomplish this it refuses to grant through rates on its lines to the American roads connecting with it, and changes the hours of arrival and departure of trains from the points of connection in order to create delays and inconvenience to travelers and traffic by that route. This tyranny, practiced by a company which has been largely subsidized by the public, and which is at the present moment begging for more, seems indiscreet unless the recent undertaking of the company to withdraw its opposition to competing lines was dishonest, for it would put a notable premium on competing enterprises. This blow at the interests of the Northwest, possibly the result of some quarrel between the Pacific men and their former partners of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba road, may at all events be taken as a gauge of the liberties enjoyed by the population of that region under this great monopoly. The government need to boast that there was considerable American emigration into Manitoba and the Northwest. We suppose that this action of the Canadian Pacific Railway company is to encourage and stimulate that emigration.

New Canadian Railway Enterprises.

In the Commons Sir John Macdonald has given notice of the introduction of resolutions granting government aid to the following railways:

For a railway from River des Lord, on the Intercolonial, to Edmondton, N. B., a subsidy of $3500 per mile for twenty-five miles, or a sum whose total does not exceed $400,000.

For a railway connecting the harbors of St. John and Halifax, via Moose Head lake and Metawamkeag lake, a subsidy of $240,000 per annum for twenty years, or a guarantee of a like sum as the interest on the bonds of the company undertaking the work.

To provide free access to the port of Quebec for the Canadian Pacific, a subsidy not exceeding $340,000 is granted, together with a subsidy already granted to connect the Canadian Pacific at St. Martin's junction, with the North Shore railway, not exceeding in the whole $1,300,000, to be applied in providing such access or obtaining control of the North Shore road, or by making running arrangements with the owners of the North Shore satisfactory to the governor in council.

Maud S. Still Improving.

In Philadelphia recently, Mr. Bonner asked Blair to drive Maud S. at a moderate pace the first three-quarters of a mile, but to let her "step out" the last quarter. She trotted the first quarter in 34¾, the half mile in 1:07¼, the three-quarters in 1:41½ and the full mile in 2:13¼. The last quarter, which was up hill, was trotted in 31½—a 2:07 gait. Two thirteen and a quarter is the fastest that she or any other horse has ever trotted so early in the season as this. If she had been driven for the full mile she could have trotted in 2:10 or better, if no accident happened to her, and it will bother any other horse to catch up to her. She is certainly a better mare than she has ever before been at this time of the year.

For constitutional or scrofulous catarrh, and for consumption induced by the scrofulous taint, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

THE WIDE WORLD.

THIS DAY'S DESPATCHES.

Receiving the Statue of Liberty.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Day broke auspiciously for the formal welcome of Bartholdi's great statue of liberty. The day was cloudless and the rays of a June sun were tempered by a gentle southwest wind. Along the lower river fronts and battery walls great crowds gathered in the early day. As the morning wore on the multitude increased. The scene in the harbor bore evidence of the liveliest description. Every craft, from the largest to the smallest, showed tri-colors and stars and stripes. When the vessels that were to escort the Isere to Bedloe's Island arrived in the lower bay, the water was swarming with crafts. As far as eye could reach there were vessels without number; every sort of vessel had been pressed into service by ambitious sightseers. Soon volumns of smoke were belching forth from the funnels of the Isere, whose propeller revolved, and she was headed in the direction of Bedloe's Island. The French man-of-war LaFlora headed the procession. Soon her gunners opened a salute of honor by firing twenty-one guns in the short space of sixty-one seconds. Hardly had the smoke cleared from her deck when the American man-of-war Omaha replied with a broadside; then the Alliance and Powhattan fired their guns. The guns of Fort Wadsworth thundered out a salute as the naval procession passed. Such a scene as was then presented had rarely ever been seen in the bay. One hundred steam yachts, with flying flags and streamers, and crowed with people, followed. The French officers of the Isere stood on the quarter deck bowing to salutes which they heard on every side all the way up the harbor until the head of the procession had arrived off Bedloe's Island.

Makes a Clean Sweep.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Every employee of the city government has been requested by Mayor Harrison, through the various chiefs of departments, to hand in a written resignation. Similar action was taken in one or two departments recently, but the new order has been made a general one. No special reason is assigned, except Mr. Harrison's belief that the mayor should be free, if he chose, upon assuming office, to appoint such subordinates as may meet his views. The general handing in of resignations does not necessarily imply that all or any of the employees will be removed.

The Sugar Industry.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—A bulletin upon the sugar industry of the United States prepared by Harvey W. Wiley, chemist of the Department of Agriculture, has been issued in pamphlet form by the Commissioner of Agriculture. It deals exhaustively with cane, beet, sorghum and maple sugars, giving statistics of manufacture and consumption, chemical analysis, methods of manufacture and modern improvements.

Sailed Under Sealed Orders.

Special to THE TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—United States steamer Iroquois, of the Pacific station, has sailed from Panama for Guayaquil, Ecuador, under sealed instructions from the Secretary of State. In regard to the case of Santos, the American citizen held there under arrest, it is understood, that the commander of the Iroquois is instructed to make a formal demand in the name of the United States for the prompt release of the prisoner and to afford him all possible assistance in procuring his liberty.

A Double Killer—With Whiskey and Pistol.

PORTLAND, June 19.—A News special from Corvallis this evening says: "A row occurred in the saloon of Joe McTimmons this afternoon between three men, when McTimmons shot into the crowd wounding Nick Beason, Sid. Moore, Messenger, James Taylor, and Joe Hinker, a deputy sheriff who was in a stable across the street. Two are dangerously wounded.

The Dreaded Cholera.

MADRID, June 19.—King Alfonso today informed Premier Conoras del Castillo of his intention to visit the cholera infested provinces. The Premier tried to dissuade the King, but without success. The King will be accompanied by the Premier and the Minister of the Interior, Senor Romero Y Robledo. The date of their departure is not yet fixed. It is reported that the Queen desires to go, too. To-day a mob of women, with a black flag, formed a procession and marched through the streets, protesting against the official declaration of the prevalence of cholera in Madrid.

Spain and England.

LONDON, June 19.—Spain, it is claimed here, has "sounded" England in regard to steps proper to be taken in order to protect the interests of both Spain and England against the intrigues of France in Morocco. A French cruiser has been dispatched to Tangier to bring to Paris an embassy from Morocco. This embassy comprises the most influential military chiefs, and includes Abdel Malek, governor of the province of Quadiadia, a strong French partisan.

The Colliery Explosion—150 Dead.

LONDON, June 19.—The Mayor of Manchester has sent a telegram to the Mayor of London thanking the latter for his offers to open a relief fund for sufferers by the Pontlebnrg colliery disaster, and adding that upward of 150 miners are known to be dead.

The Canadian Pacific Resolution.

OTTAWA, June 19.—The debate on the Canadian Pacific relief resolution was resumed in the House of Commons to-day. It is expected that a decision will be reached before the house rises to-night, and that the resolution will be adopted by a strict party vote.

Locusts on Long Island.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Reports from various parts of Long Island reports seventeen year locusts have made their appearance in countless numbers.

An Ovation.

LONDON, June 19.—Lord Randolph Churchill received an ovation to-day from a crowd assembled at Windsor depot, where he took the train for Ascot Heath.

Priest not Exempt.

Special to THE TIMES.

PARIS, June 19.—The Chamber of Deputies by a vote of 290 to 120, refused to exempt priests from service in army reserves.

West Give any Assurances.

LONDON, June 19.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Labouchere asked if it was true the Marquis of Salisbury was prevented from taking office by failure to obtain assurance of assistance from the retiring government. Labouchere said that he himself and many other Radicals strongly objected to any assurances being given Conservatives in the event of their taking office.

Gladstone, in reply to the question of Labouchere, said when he was last asked a similar question, he stated that he had not at that time any conference with the Marquis of Salisbury. Since then, however, he had received overtures from the Marquis of Salisbury. Should there be between the Marquis and himself, it would be made public. There would be no secret understanding, whatever, between the Marquis of Salisbury and himself.

The House then, upon the motion of Gladstone, adjourned until Tuesday.

Salisbury and Friends in Council.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 20.—4:30 p. m.—Political matters are looking briskly to day and people are taking an active interest in the final issue. This morning Lord Ponsonby, private secretary to the Queen, delivered to the Marquis of Salisbury a message from Her Majesty. The Marquis, immediately upon the receipt of the message, telegraphed to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Arthur Balfour, Wm. Henry Smith and Sir Richard Ashton Cross, that he desired to meet them in council. In a short time the gentlemen named were in conference with the Marquis of Salisbury in his own house.

Nothing but Gladstone and his Party.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 20.—The Gladstone Cabinet met this morning and discussed the scope of the assurances of aid to carry on the government which it is proposed, the Liberals shall give to the Conservatives.

The Pall Mall Gazette in an editorial article to-day, says the opinion is growing that nothing will break the existing deadlock but the return to office of Mr. Gladstone and his party.

Gladstone to Resume the Premiership.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, June 20.—The report is current this afternoon in some quarters that the Gladstone Cabinet has concluded to give all aid that may be in their power in reason to enable the Conservatives to take office. It is also said that the Cabinet adopted a resolution to this effect. There are other reports, however, that the Tories have refused to accept the responsibilities of forming a Ministry under existing circumstances, and that Mr. Gladstone will resume the Premiership.

Cholera Still Marching On.

Special to THE TIMES.

MADRID, June 20.—Official reports of the march of cholera in Spain for the past 24 hours are as follows: [illegible] 18, deaths 14; Valencia province, new cases 249, deaths 124; Murcia city, new cases 112, deaths 37; Murcia province, new cases 240, deaths 83; Caseleton province, new cases 97, deaths 57.

Rapid Increase of the Scourge.

Special to THE TIMES.

MADRID, June 19.—The cholera returns, official, for yesterday are: Madrid, no new cases, 4 deaths; Valencia city, new cases 36, deaths 12; Valencia province, new cases 251, deaths 13; Murcia, new cases 96, deaths 25; Murcia province, new cases 226, deaths 65; Castillon province, new cases 85, deaths 46.

Lowell Arrives in Boston.

BOSTON, June 20.—James Russell Lowell arrived here this morning on the Scythia and was met on the dock by a few friends. There was no formal reception. Mr. Lowell was interviewed by a reporter who said: "I suppose you are glad to be home once more." "Yes, on some accounts I am. It is pleasant to be among my old friends, but the English people have been so very kind to me that it is not without much regret that I leave them, and the pleasant associations by which I have been surrounded. Your reception has been most flattering, particularly as the English people have rather peculiar ideas concerning America. The reporter ventured some further remarks. Mr. Lowell smiled and said, "yes they seem to have taken to me for some reason. I could ask for no more than I received." It is understood that a grand reception will be tendered to Mr. Lowell at Cambridge at an early day. Mr. Lowell has gone to his daughter's home at Southborough.

A Valuable Find.

Special to THE TIMES.

CINCINNATI, O., June 20.—The story is published here of the finding of $75,000 in gold and silver coin, hidden in the walls and ceilings of the four story building, owned by Louis Schertz, who occupied the place for years when in the liquor business. He died recently and left to his brother a memorandum showing in what places money would be found, but did not indicate amount. As deceased had always appeared to be a poor man and lodged in the store room, the finding of this large sum was a surprise. It is said he left valuable secrets in whisky compounding and rectifying, and plans for the construction of distilleries.

Will it be Another Grasshopper Plague?

Special to THE TIMES.

CHICAGO, June 20.—A gentleman in this city has received living samples of the California grasshoppers. The chief interest of the consignment consists in the fact that the gentleman who was a resident of Kansas in 1873, 1874 and 1875 finds them to be identical with the pests which ravaged that State in the years named, completely destroying the crops wherever they appeared. The specimens in hand seem to have lost but little of their activity in the journey from the Pacific coast.

General Grant Not so Well.

Special to THE TIMES.

MOUNT MCGREGOR, June 20.—General Grant did not sleep as well as usual last night. The intervals of awaking being more frequent. Doctor Douglas called once to clean the General's throat, after he had taken food. This forenoon the General's voice is clear; his pulse 68; full, strong and regular.

The meed of merit for promoting personal asthetics is due to J. C. Ayer & Co., whose incomparable Hair Vigor is a universal beautifier of the hair. Harmless, effective, agreeable, it has taken rank among the indispensable articles of the toilet. To sandy locks it gives luxuriance; and withered hair it clothes with the hue of youth.

RELIEF AT LAST!

The Government Resolutions for aiding the C. P. R. Carried.

Special to THE TIMES.

OTTAWA, June 20.—At 2:30 this morning a vote was taken on the government resolutions granting relief to the Canadian Pacific Railway. The announcement was received by a vote [illegible] the division was hailed by the House and those in the galleries with demonstrations of approbation. The vote was a strict party one. The prominent officials of the company were in the gallery during the debate. The speeches of the leaders of the opposition were exceedingly hostile to the management of the company. The company will now, it is understood, push forward rapidly the completion of the work and the thorough equipment of the line.

Business is now being rushed through rapidly and the hope is entertained that the House will be prorogued next week. Many members have already left for their homes and others are leaving daily.

Theatrical Stars in their Orbits.

George C. Miln is said to be writing a book on the stage, starting which report Leander Richardson is unkind enough to add: "The feverish anxiety which prevails regarding the publication of this volume is shared principally by Mr. Miln and his publisher."—Minnie Maddern is to be managed next season by Horace McVicker and W. T. Elliott.—Dixey is greatly elated over his legal victory in protecting his exclusive right to publicly enable "It's English, you know."—Rose Coghlan has again experienced a change of intention, and will star next season. P. S.—No she won't. Very latest: She may, and again she may not.—Frank Mayo thinks England is ripe for "Nordeck."—John L. Sullivan has a $1000 per week engagement to pose as a statue in connection with Lester & Albrus' minstrels next season.—The Princess Lidi Dolgorouki, daughter of the late czar's morganic widow, is scandalizing Berlin society by appearing frequently in public exhibitions as a violinist.—Gerster has been blessed with another baby, and little Sembrich has temporarily retired from the stage "for domestic reasons."—Aimee promises to never leave the stage alive.—Emma Juch is to be one of the American prima donnas in the forthcoming school of American opera, to be founded in New York by Mme. Thurber.—Georgia Cayvan's—Dion Boucicault's nancee, Miss Thorndyke, is about a foot taller than he, and when they ramble around arm in arm it looks like a section out of Gideon's band.—Mme. Parsch Madi is very proud of her hands and feet, all four of which are small, plump and pretty.—Theodore Thomas smiled a smile out in California, and they have had fine weather there ever since. Miss Mary Anderson is rusticating in the English lake districts. She is now at Lake Windermere and spends her days in driving and climbing the mountains and her evenings in boating.—Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt's villa near Harve has been sold at auction. The furniture brought $5000.—M. Coquelin will open his American session at the Star theater in New York on Jan. 4 next. Afterward he will go on a ten months' tour throughout the United States.

Lady Students.

At the recent convocation of the University of Toronto five ladies carried away the honors of Bachelors of Arts, they were Miss May B. Bald, Miss C. E. Brown, Miss M. N. Brown, Miss Ella Gardiner and Miss M. Langley. When they presented themselves on the platform they were received with loud cheering, again and again renewed. A similar demonstration took place when Miss M. N. Brown again came forward to receive the gold medal for proficiency in modern languages. In presenting her to the vice-chancellor, Dr. Wilson said that four years ago the university decided to admit ladies to a perfect equality with gentlemen in the arts course, and that change had his hearty sympathy at the time. To-day they had the results of that change, five ladies presenting themselves for their degrees in this university. (Applause.) They realized the change all the more because in the successful winner of the gold meda' in modern languages, Miss Brown, they recognized the daughter of one who for a long time was a senator of the university, and intimately connected with the institution, and one of the most zealous and faithful advocates of a non-denominational, provincial and national basis, on which Toronto University was founded and on which he trusted it would ever remain. (Cheers.) In that institution it was now recognized that there was no distinction of sex, and what they had seen that day indicated that before long the higher education of the fair sex would exercise an important influence on politics and social life. (Applause). Mr. Mulock, in presenting the medal to Miss Brown, expressed his regret at the absence of Hon. Edward Blake, who would have been delighted to have performed the duty which had fallen to his (Mr. Mulock's) lot. That was the first occasion on which any lady had ever knelt at his feet (laughter) and he felt somewhat embarrassed by it. He had, however, the greatest pleasure in handing the medal to Miss Brown, and congratulated her on her success. Another of the lady graduates, Miss Gardiner, of Ingersoll, has a highly creditable record, having taken three first-class honors in moderns out of five subjects. A third year lady student in arts, Miss Balmer, winner of the Lansdowne gold medal, was warmly congratulated on her success, this being the third year in succession that she has carried off a valuable prize.

Chapter of Accidents.

The following accidents are reported by the Free Press to have occurred in Comox: Mr. Kuy, while cut fishing, accidentally cut off his big toe with an axe. Mr. Matthesen fell off his new barn on Saturday, a distance of 28 feet. He is not seriously injured. A Swede working in Urquhart's saw mill fell only a distance of three feet and injured himself internally. On Tuesday a terrific thunder storm passed over Comox. The settlers have commenced haying, but the crops will be light.

THE broken Gould cables in the North Atlantic are being repaired, and the work will be finished in a month.

THE British government has ordered the payment of £100 to each widow of a Canadian voyageur in the Nile expedition, and of £50 to the mother of each lost voyageur.

HENRY LABOUCHERE, of London Truth, is said to receive more invitations out to dinner, and to have a more advantageous position for getting scent of society tittle-tattle than any other man in London.

THE late waterspout at Cuarenta, Mexico, practically annihilated the town, and 170 bodies of the dead have been recovered. Another storm has caused a few deaths and destroyed property at Leon.

RUSSIA will consent to a resumption of diplomatic relations with the Vatican, providing the Pope induces the Catholic Bishops of Poland to relinquish the idea of re-establishing the nationality of Poland.

SIR PETER LAMSDEN has asked the [illegible] raised in London to secure for him a "sword of honor," to suspend further action in the matter until his relations with the war office are in a more settled state.

SOME of the eastern American papers discover a mania for divorce in the country, in some cities one in every ten marriages. It is stated that in the last thirty years the proportion of divorces to marriages has doubled in all the southern states.

THE statement that MR. GLADSTONE has declared that he will stand for Midlothian at the next general election in the United Kingdom would seem to indicate that the "grand old man" even yet has no intention of retiring from political life.

EX-PRESIDENT ZALDIVAR can hardly be the patriot he would have Americans infer he is, since he freely admits that he has not only left San Salvador on a "leave of absence," but that he will probably never return there. He says he ardently desires to see a reunion of the five Central American republics, but he, at a critical period in Central American history, glides off to Europe and leaves his San Salvadorians to work out their own salvation.

In the report of the Dominion fisheries for 1884 the total value of the fish produce for the year in the different provinces is estimated at $17,766,404 against $16,958,192 in 1883. This is exclusive of the fish consumed by the Indian population of British Columbia, Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. The amount of the fishing bounty paid out last year was $130,227, distributed among 922 vessels and 272 boats.

THE story that the QUEEN is pleased at the turn in British politics is by no means improbable. Her sympathies are naturally with the Tories, and their return to power can hardly fail to be greeted by her with feelings of satisfaction. Despite his personal aristocratic leanings and tendencies, MR. GLADSTONE is a Liberal; and liberalism, in Conservative eyes, is a near relation of radicalism, which is not many removes from socialism. But whether the QUEEN will have cause to be entirely satisfied with her new premier remains to be seen. If GLADSTONE retains his leadership of the Liberals, the new ministry will pass many a bad quarter of an hour before the close of the next session.

SIR HENRY TYLER, president of the Grand Trunk railway on the 13th had an interview with members of the government regarding the purchase of the North Shore for the purpose of handing it over to the Canadian Pacific. Though nothing definite was done, the interview was highly satisfactory. Respecting the American pooling arrangements Sir Henry considers that the result, when decided by the commissioner in Chicago and approved of, would be generally fair and satisfactory. As to the Canadian Pacific, Sir HENRY does not in any way wish to get the better of them in his dealings with the government.

CANADA'S WATER WAY.

Recognizing the fact that Canada possesses an unrivalled water way in the St. Lawrence river and the great inland lakes, the government of this country has from time to time incurred a vast debt in improving the great natural highway for the products of the west to the Atlantic seaboard. Obstacles in the St. Lawrence have been removed; the canals enlarged and improved, while a complete new system—the Welland canal route—was recently completed at a cost of many millions. Attention is now being given by both the Canadian and United States governments to deepening and widening the St. Clair flats channel, which are considered not sufficient for the increasing upper lake traffic. Canada must then, in order to be entirely independent of the United States, undertake the construction of a canal at Sault Ste. Marie. At present Canadian vessels have to pass through the American lock at that point. This will be a [illegible] undertaking, however; [illegible] it is absolutely necessary if Canada wishes to retain her supremacy and the natural advantages possessed by her for controlling the western traffic. With the improvements we have suggested the products of the great Northwest could be taken by rail to Port Arthur and thence sent to any port in the world by water bottoms during the season of navigation, by such vessels as could ascend from the ocean.

The Americans are equally alive to the importance of their route to the seaboard, via the Erie canal from Lake Erie to the Hudson river at Albany. The State of New York, finding competition on the St. Lawrence route becoming strong, abolished toll rates on the Erie canal a short time since. The effect of this movement became at once perceptible on the shipping of grain, and other products at Montreal and other eastern points in Canada. The falling off has been increasing while New York exports show a vast improvement as compared with former years. Efforts are now being made in Montreal, Quebec, Kingston and Halifax, to bring about a remedy, and with that object in view. We learn from Montreal the one of the largest meetings of merchants and shippers ever held in that enterprising city took place on the 11th, for the purpose of receiving the report of the deputation appointed to consult the government on the question of the abolition of the canal tolls and harbor dues. The deputation was apparently anything but satisfied with the result of the interview. The forwarders were, it appears, taken to task by the ministry for charging exorbitant rates, and bringing about the present stagnation in the carrying trade of the Dominion. It was pointed out in this connection that the rates charged on the Erie canal were [illegible] cheaper than those by way of Kingston and the St. Lawrence. The Erie forwarders, it was claimed, could afford to carry grain three times the distance at a third more than is charged on the St. Lawrence, and in vessels with a capacity of only 40 per cent of those of the other routes. The ministers, in urging this view of the question, stated that it appeared that the government was expected to bear more than its share. The meeting adjourned, pending a decision of the government. The majority present expressed the opinion that the petition would be favorably received, notwithstanding the objections raised. To-day in shipping circles bets are made that unless the request of the trade is complied with rates upon other descriptions of freight will be raised, or the St. Lawrence will be abandoned in favor of the American ports. It is a foregone conclusion here that unless something is immediately done the trade of this port will be permanently injured. There is not a vessel to-day in upper Canadian waters that is paying expenses, and ANDREW ALLAN of the Allan line, is authority for the statement that their vessels are sinking thousands of pounds every trip. The managers of the Dominion line say the present season is the most unprofitable of their experience, and many other lines complain that they cannot procure a cargo at any price. Great pressure is brought to bear upon the government to abolish the tolls on the canal, and reduce the harbor dues to one eight of a cent. The forwarders talk of reducing their rates ½ cent, when they believe they will be in a position to compete with New York.

THE events of the past few days show that there is probably not a Tory leader in England, unless it be LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, who does not hesitate to undertake the task of forming a cabinet to conduct the government of Great Britain. LORD CHURCHILL's severe censure of MR. GLADSTONE's Egyptian and Afghan policy would seem to indicate that he would favor an immediate war with Russia over Penjdeh, and with Germany over Zanzibar, and with France over Egypt. LORD SALISBURY is a Jingo of less violence than LORD CHURCHILL, and as for SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE, he is too sluggish and bigoted even for the Tories. SIR MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH is hysterical. Indeed, it would be an interesting spectacle to see the Tories take hold of the government at this juncture.

WE are spending a million a year on the Indians and yet one out of every four adults in the region north of the railway joined Riel without cause or provocation, and began a long carnival of murder and pillage. It is evident that we cannot afford to feed the Indians in idleness, and at the same time permit him to carry arms. This is one of the most difficult questions with which the government is called upon to deal.

TWENTY FIVE thousand dollars is said to have been the price paid by English publishers for the copyright of GEN. GORDON's diary. It will not fill more than one ordinary volume.

ANOTHER PROVINCIAL RIGHTS CASE.

Reference was made in THE TIMES a few days ago to an important case that was being tried in Toronto, in which was involved the right of the Dominion and Ontario governments to the timber in the Algoma and Keewatin districts—known as the debatable territory—claimed by both these governments. The judgment of the chancellor in the case was delivered on the 10th inst. at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. The decision is in favor of the province of Ontario, which claims the right to a large territory on the south side of Wabigoon lake, as against the defendants, who have a bonus from the Dominion government to cut timber on the territory in question. The Dominion government base their claim to the land upon the cession to them of the rights of the Indians under what is known as the "Northwest angle treaty," but the chancellor holds that the Indians have no proprietory right in the soil. The decision of the court, if confirmed on appeal, will be a [illegible] to the Dominion government, inasmuch as it is absolutely necessary if Canada wishes to retain her supremacy and the natural advantages possessed by her for controlling the western traffic. With the improvements we have suggested the products of the great Northwest could be taken by rail to Port Arthur and thence sent to any port in the world by water bottoms during the season of navigation, by such vessels as could ascend from the ocean.

THE CHINESE QUESTION IN THE EAST.

The Winnipeg Daily Free Press, of the 11th inst., copies from THE TIMES our report of the anti-Chinese meeting held on the 22nd May, and commenting thereon says:

"The anti-Chinese movement in British Columbia is assuming a threatening aspect. It is evident that the people of that province have determined to stand no more trifling, and that if trouble is to be avoided their wishes must be attended to. The open-air meeting of the workingmen of Victoria held in that city a short time ago should serve as a warning to those in authority that something should be done promptly. * * * Yet when the popular outbreak comes in British Columbia, as come it apparently will before long, we shall be told that the government had no intimation of approaching trouble."

GUELPH Daily Mercury: "If we may judge from the report of a meeting which we find in the DAILY TIMES, of Victoria, of 22nd May, the feeling of antagonism towards the Chinese in that province is growing in intensity. In this number of the TIMES there is a long report of a meeting held by the working men of Victoria exclusively, the other citizens taking no part in it. It was held in the open air, but unlike the noted Kearney and his meetings in San Francisco against the Chinese, this one in Victoria was composed of respectable men, and it was conducted in a respectable and orderly manner.

KING'S EVIL
Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.
SCROFULA
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful vigor to the vital organs and [illegible] the entire system.
Regenerative Medicine
Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as the Absolute Cure
For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood, it is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

JUNIA'S NINETEENTH YEAR.

[Lenta Wilson Smith.]

"Are you really going, June?"

"Certainly. It was my father's last wish that I should spend this year teaching a district school, and I shall do so, if possible."

"What a strange request it was! And wouldn't I like to see the elegant Miss St. John rustling her rich robes among the battered benches of a district school-house——"

"O, stop, Mabel Bryne! give me credit for better sense than that. My rustling robes will be packed away in cousin Jane's store-room. Why, I have a complete outfit in perfect keeping with a salary of $30 a month.

"Oh, horrible! and you expect to enjoy it?"

"Why not, Mabel? It will be a relief to forget that I am an heiress. Even my nights are hideous with dreams of fortune hunters, but how happy I shall be as a poor teacher."

"But, June, seriously, if you must leave us all, and bury yourself in a place that never was heard of before, why must you make a dowdy of yourself?"

"Don't worry, dear, my dresses are pretty, in good taste, and suitable for the place in which I expect to wear them. What next?"

"What will our gentlemen friends think of you, June? The star they worship, sinking out of their sky to shine over a distant school?" "Their opinion makes no difference to me, Mabel. I should have more respect for them all if they would do a little honest work once in a while. If I were a man I would scorn a useless life. A few of our acquaintances read law an hour or two a day, others watch their speculations, the majority lounge in their library, or billiard hall, drive in the park or read novels till time to dress for dinner or ball. The greater part of life is spent in saying pretty nothings to pretty society girls. No wonder such men marry for money; it is the easiest way they know of to earn their living. O for manly men!"

"Mercy! how you go on, Junia! If your father had requested you to give a course of lectures on your 19th year, I should not have wondered."

Mabel could not understand her friend's 'freak' as she termed it. One would expect her to observe her father's last wish, and she could skim over a year of teaching in a lady-like way in some of the schools near home, but to go 100 miles away; and enter into the work with heart and soul as Junia was doing, was beyond her comprehension. So it was with a good deal of curiosity that Mabel, a few weeks later, broke the seal of Junia's first letter, and read:

SANDY COVE, ——

DEAR MABEL: I have purposely delayed writing, that first impressions might settle into convictions, in order that my letter should convey no wrong ideas.

One can make no mistake about the scenery. It is grand. A view of the sea, a sharp rocky coast line, with a tiny core around which the village nestles. A background of magnificent old trees, beyond which lie the small rocky farm and pasture lands, while against the near horizon, rise the grand old mountains—the everlasting hills.

The cool sea breeze floats in through the window, bringing me the low, sad music of the breaking waves. I look out and see below me (my room is on the cliff) the village with its clustering cottages, and weather-worn church and school-house standing a little apart. The sunshine warmly down upon the sparkling water where the fishermen's boats are idly drifting, and upon the silvery beach, where children are playing with merry laughter, and shouts of glee.

You would not consider my present home elegant, but it is the best in the village, is very neat, comfortable and cheerful. To be sure, my window might be larger, the walls of my room higher, but so long as this delicious breeze lasts, I will not complain.

"Widow Ferris" has boarded "the teacher" for years. The family consists of herself, a maid of all work and Mr. Norman Ferris, whom she persists in calling "My boy, Norman," although he is chief man of the village, must be 35, is not less than six feet tall and strong enough to pick up his little mother with ease.

He is of a scientific turn of mind, and has a "den" in the kitchen chamber. His mother is worried over his strange propensities, and was not a little comforted when I told her my father had a fondness for scientific studies. The widow herself is a fine specimen of New England womanhood, hiding under her natural reserve a wealth of devotion and motherly kindness. Since her husband's death she depends wholly on Norman, who, with the exception of a couple years at school, has cared for the farm, and now has contentedly settled down here for life. I feel he lacks energy to launch out and make his mark in the world.

I wish you could visit my school. It would afford you rare amusement, and a description can never do it justice. Scholars of all ages and all degrees of intelligence; some agreeable, some otherwise; some surly, some obedient; but I am so interested in them. Evidently my methods are new to them. I take them out among the rocks and give them simple lessons in geology, or out on the beach and talk to them of nature, history, and the treasures of the sea. It is like opening a fairy wonder book to them, and I find my reward in their bright, eager faces.

Mabel, I was never so happy as now. My useless, frivolous life was humiliating to me; an unsatisfied longing gave me no peace. My father must have foreseen this, and provided the work in which I am now so thoroughly happy.

It is my ambition to make this a model school of its kind. Time will tell.

But as I have been writing, the shadows have lengthened, twilight hovers over the the mountains, and casts its shade over the sea so I will close this letter wishing you could enjoy with me this great scene.

Your friend, JUNIA.

Presumably there are busy bodies everywhere. There certainly was in Sandy Cove, and when Junia began congratulating herself on the harmony with which her school work was progressing, rumors reached her ears which, spite of her efforts to the contrary, had a very depressing influence over her. Time only made matters worse. One night Widow Ferris noticed that the gloom had deepened, and as she poured the tea she remarked: "Miss St. John you look tired to-night or discouraged, which is it?"

"A little of both, I think," she replied, managing to smile faintly.

"Why, I hope nothing unpleasant has happened in school?"

"No, nothing in school;" then turning to Norman she continued:

"I must explain, and ask your advice. As you are one of the directors I desire your approval."

"I think you have it already. I have felt so certain of your success as a teacher that I have neglected the school more than I ever did before. What difficulty has arisen?"

"In my work here I have departed from the old routine of teaching, and have tried to make study a real pleasure instead of a dull, mechanical task. My methods have been discussed by the pupils at home, and a few of the parents have cast the notes of disapproval. As I paid no attention to them a general dissatisfaction seemed to rise, and to-day I received this." She took from her pocket a paper and passed it to Norman, who read in an amused tone:

"MISS ST. JOHN:—We employed you to teach our children those branches which for the foundation of all knowledge, and we respectfully request you to confine your instructions thereto, instead of neglecting these most important studies to pursue branches probably of interest to yourself, but far too advanced for the full comprehension of your pupils.

Then followed a list of names. Norman laughed heartily, but seeing the real distress in Junia's face, checked his mirth and said sympathetically:

"Don't let that trouble you a moment. It is evidently the work of some busy—"

"It's scandalous," interrupted the widow indignantly. "But don't feel down-hearted, Miss St. John, Norman will make it all right. I've no doubt it started from Susan Bittle; she wanted the school, and I'm sure she couldn't teach anything but the four rudiments to save her life. I just hope you won't give up to 'em."

"I suppose the parents have a right to remonstrate if they think I am doing unwisely, I wish to convince them to the contrary. Mr. Ferris, do you think they would attend a public examination?"

"Yes; it's the very thing. I will write notices and see that the other directors are there, if you wish me to," replied he, feeling a new interest in the young teacher whom he had hitherto scarcely noticed more than courtesy demanded.

The day of the examination came and the school-house was crowded. Each class was orally examined. The scholars acquitted themselves so creditably that malicious spectators were visibly crest fallen, while many faces gloomed with satisfaction, and as the last class was dismissed the directors expressed their hearty approval of Miss St. John's management of the school. Then Junia stepped out upon the platform, and her sweet, clear voice had no tone of malice or exultation to mar it's purity as she said.

"My friends, I thank you for your attendance this afternoon, and as I hold a place of trust over your children, I wish to explain some of my past work which has evidently been misunderstood. While I have opened before them new fields of study, I have endeavored to awaken in them an interest in various branches, I trust you are convinced that I have not neglected the common studies. My object has been to make the task of learning a pleasure; to arouse an interest for books and a love for nature.

"I will tell you the truth. The first week I taught here I was touched with pity to see the dreamy, mechanical way these children did their work—the serious, burdened faces they brought into the school-room, and the hilarious joy with which they each night welcomed the close of school. In searching for some method of instructing them, I remembered my own happy childhood, untrammeled by the restrictions of a school-room. My father was my teacher. We wandered over fields, mountains, and ocean shore, learning the wonders of nature, and at night we studied the heavens above us without going too far for my childish mind, or neglecting necessary rudiments. When I entered school, it was only to find in the sciences, old friends. The research which was cheerless drudgery to some was to me a ceaseless delight, full of familiar truths which had charmed me years before.

"So I adopted my father's plan in teaching your children, and as I saw their faces brighten, and heard their eager questionings, I realized anew the benefit of awakening in a child the love for study by giving him a glimpse of the wonderful things there are to learn. I love my present work, and have a deep interest in the welfare of these children. If my work is a failure, it will not be through lack of earnest, conscientious endeavor.

"I see by your faces that I have your sympathy and good will, so I shall resume my work with new zeal and fresh courage."

A loud cheer was heartily given and the examination was over.

"You have had a grand victory, Miss St. John," said Norman as they climbed the cliff path together.

"Yes," she answered, smiling brightly, "I expected it."

"Why should you?" quizzically.

"Because when we are in the right we may always expect success or victory," she answered confidently.

"I wish I had your faith," he remarked moodily, and the walk was finished in silence.

Going up to his "den," Norman sat down to study a model. He believed he had invented a valuable machine.

"In the right!" he murmured.

"Yes, I know I am in the right, but must I wait for success till neither defeat nor victory would have power to stir my dead heart! No, no; this year must end the struggle."

And Junia, flushed with her own success, was recalling a little contemptuously his last words to her. "Wishes he had my faith! What a grand success he might make of life. I believe he lacks energy. Whatever he is trying to do in sciences can be better done in a city than in this out-of-the-way place, where there can be no assistance of any sort. Big! still he buries himself here—very contentedly, I fancy, and cries for more faith! Her rosy lips wore a scornful expression, and yet she could not help giving this earnest, thoughtful man her hearty respect.

Autumn, winter, and spring came and went and it was summer once more. The year was nearly gone, and it had been a happy one for Junia. Her vacations had been spent in the city, where she enjoyed society with a new zest. But the summer was unusually warm and she began to long for much needed rest.

One hot, sultry evening when even the sea seemed faint and still, Junia's low room was oppressive. She looked longingly down on the little box of a balcony under her window, which shadowed the front door, and wondered if it would bear her weight. Knowing that the lattice-work beneath was quite substantial, she threw out some rugs and ventured out upon the boards. Although they creaked with every motion as if resenting her freedom, she curled down on the rugs and delightedly drank in the quiet beauty of the night.

Presently there were footsteps along the the hall, and Norman, evidently in an unusual mood, threw himself down on the bench with so much emphasis as to shake the little portico, much to Junia's terror.

"The 'den' must have blown up!" she declared mentally. "I never before knew him to spend an evening out of it. What can be the matter?"

For an hour or more she remained almost motionless, for the creaking structure might betray her, and she could not compromise her dignity by letting any one know she had climbed through a window! With a sense of relief she heard the widow, shutting doors and windows for the night, approach the hall.

"Why Norman! you here! I came near locking out, why aren't you at work as usual?"

"I can't do any more till I get some money, that's all," was the low reply.

"How much will do, Norman? I have $X laid by."

"I will not use your money, mother, besides, nothing less than a $100 will do. I'm tempted to sell Prince."

"Oh! that colt is just like one of the family. Have you had a chance lately to sell the farm?" Her voice trembled.

"Mother, I've told you repeatedly that I'll never sell your old home unless you wish it sold."

"But, my boy, I can't see you wearing your life out all for nothing."

"O mother! if you only had some faith in my work. I'm certain of success now, and $100 would show you that my labor has not been in vain."

"If I could feel sure of your success, Norman. I would sacrifice anything. But if the farm should be sold, we would have nothing left. But we might sell part; now that twenty acres on the point, I'd be glad to sell."

"Mother, dear, no one would buy that, it is scarcely more than a great rock. But we'll dismiss the subject. I'm sorry I mentioned it. I was so annoyed to be at a complete standstill. If you could spare me for a while, I could—"

"O, Norman, you're all I've got; don't leave me yet, wait a little longer, and I am sure if it is right for you to succeed some way will be opened."

A suppressed sigh was the only answer, and they both entered the house. When all was still, Junia crept back into her room and sat downcast in the darkness to think. She had heard all, although the speakers, as if not unmindful of their boarder, had spoken so low that the tones could not have penetrated her room.

She understood at last. A loving son struggling with his ambition, sacrificing his dearest hopes rather than leave a devoted mother or sell the poor old place so dear to her. Junia had wronged him in thought, but brave and noble he seemed as she realized that he had so completely hidden his trials under a cloak of apparent content, that she had never suspected he had a desire to know or be known outside of Sandy Cove.

A hundred dollars! What a paltry sum to her who had never felt the need of money. She longed to place a thousand at his disposal. But she knew that this proud man would accept neither a gift nor a loan from her, and she must supply his need through some strategy.

In due time her lawyer in the city received the following letter:

SANDY COVE.—DEAR SIR: I desire to possess a certain tract of land near this village. It is called Rocky Point, is owned by Widow Ferris, to whom any one in the place can direct you. The land is comparatively worthless, but I will pay—I desire to pay—$600 for the twenty acres. The location is fine, and I have thought of building a summer residence. You know I am a 'poor school teacher,' I can make no such purchases, but if you will prospect around here, hint at a summer residence and purchase Rocky Point, you shall be sufficiently remunerated and I will relieve you of your purchase in due time. I need not caution you to avoid all mention of my name, or, should we meet here, any recognition of

Yours truly, JUNIA ST. JOHN.

Later a stranger visited the small town to buy land. After wavering between Rocky Point and twenty acres on the west, he was nearly distracted between hope and fear, he suddenly grew enthusiastic over the Point as he and Norman stood watching the sunset light fade from the sky and sea.

"Magnificent! the finest view along the coast. Mr. Ferris what will you sell this lot for?"

"What will you give me an acre?"

"Well," and the lawyer deliberately viewed his surroundings, "such a situation is really worth $50, but I'd be willing to give you $50, cash down."

"Do you mean that, sir?" asked Norman with suppressed eagerness.

"Why, certainly; and if you agree to that price, we'll make out the papers to-morrow. I'm in a hurry to get back home. What do you say?"

"If you are satisfied I certainly am," he replied as in a dream, and a few minutes later he was rushing over the cliff to his home.

He burst into the little parlor and seeing only his mother musing in the twilight, he caught her in his arms and cried out:

"O mother, mother! I've sold Rocky Point for $600—"

But his voice broke. He sank down in a chair and covered his face with his shaking hands. He had bravely fought with trials, but this unexpected deliverance completely unmanned him.

"Norman, my boy, I never thought you cared so much," quavered the widow, with her hand on his bowed head.

"It was everything to me!" came thrillingly, and Junia stole noiselessly from the room, her own eyes full of happy tears.

As the school year waned, Junia grew pale and thin. She had worked hard and been most successful, but it had told upon her physical strength, and to the unanimous request for her return to the school, this fact was the excuse for her refusal. She was a general favorite in the village, and to the inmates of the Cliffs cottage she had grown very dear.

It is said that opposite natures attract each other, but whatever the temperament, there is always a subtle sympathy between noble minds which tends to draw them together. This was the case with Norman Ferris and Junia. Each saw in the other intellectual and moral affinities, a taste for like pursuits, the same yearning of soul to make life useful and exalted. Circumstances may separate them, but such natures turn to each other as naturally, as the magnetic needle turns to the north.

Junia's school closes with a grand picnic, a joyous occasion, but as the loved teacher was to leave Sandy Cove the following day, it closed with saddened faces and tearful good-byes.

It was evening, and in the moonlight Norman and Junia were taking their last row around the little bay. The beauty of the night, and the thought of coming separation kept them silent till at length Norman rested upon his oars and looking earnestly into the fair face before him, spoke in low tones:

"Have you any regrets at leaving us, Miss Junia?"

"It could hardly be otherwise, when my life here has been so pleasant. I should like to teach another year, but fear my strength will not permit."

"You are right. You do not know how I have longed to save you from this drudgery. It is plain that you are not accustomed to labor, and it is all the harder for you. O, Junia, let me save you from toil and care. I have little to offer now, but my prospects are flattering. I know I am not worthy of you, and so I have been silent all these months in which you have been constantly my in thoughts, but I love you Junia, and I cannot let you go away in ignorance of it. My life shall prove it if you will but stay with me." He paused for her to speak. Her voice trembled a little.

"I have no near kindred in all the world, and in my loneliness your words seem very sweet to me, but I must tell you a secret before more is said. I am not obliged to work. My father wished me to teach this one year, and I thought it best to assume the role of the dependent teacher, not dreaming that the deception would prove a serious one. Believe me, I thank you sincerely for your wish to save me from care, and I feel honored by your preference."

"If I understand aright, you are an heiress in disguise!" questioned Norman, bitterly.

"Some would so express it," she replied.

Suddenly he enquired almost fiercely:

"Did you buy "Rocky Point?"

She grew a trifle paler, but bound to be true, answered bravely:

"Through my lawyer, yes."

His face flushed hotly, his pride was wounded, and he spoke very coldly:

"The money has been of inestimable value to me, but I cannot thank you now, and furthermore, Miss St. John, I withdraw my suit until my position admits of my wooing an heiress."

There was only the sound of the oars as he rowed rapidly to the shore. Junia sat pale and silent in the stern of the boat, wondering if wealth must ever prove a curse to her, and if it would at last shut her out of heaven. She watched the rapidly nearing shore and knew that henceforth they two would walk in separate paths. Then her cry rang out—

"O Norman! the ledge!"

Too late; the frail boat crashed upon the sunken rocks, and they were struggling in the water. Never before had Norman forgotten to keep the channel that entered the cove. The shock, the plunge into the cold, dark water was too much for Junia, and it was an unconscious form that Norman supported as he swam to the shore. He carried her up the cliff path to his mother, under whose care she soon recovered. But in that brief space when she lay as if life had departed he felt what it would be to lose her forever, and pride was conquered.

And now a fine summer residence adorns Rocky Point, where many learned men delight to pay their respects to Professor Ferris, who has become eminent in the scientific world.

Sandy Cove school building has been enlarged and beautified, supplied with all modern appliances, together with a cabinet of curiosities, and a handsome library, the gifts of Junia Ferris in memory of her 19th year.

In Patagonia they fine a man two goats for killing his wife. The law is very strict on the subject, too, and if the fine isn't promptly paid he is compelled to marry again. That makes him hustle around for the goats.

CITY AND PROVINCE

—City lawyers are laughing at the Colonist just now.

—Tenders are asked for a new school house at Langley Prairie.

—Capt. J. A. Clark was re-elected school trustee for Port Moody.

—The Burrard Inlet license court granted a liquor license to Mr. Geo. Annand, at Port Moody.

—Strawberries have gone down to 18 cents a gallon in Seattle. They still stand firm at 25 cents a plate in Victoria.

—The City Council is repairing the sidewalks and mending its ways generally.

—It is the intention of the Nanaimo Pioneer Equitable Society to erect a large and handsome building.

—In a foot race at New Westminster yesterday, J. Weddle defeated W. Beveridge by a few feet.

—All the labor organizations of the city will assemble to-night with the printers' union to consider the difficulty between the Standard and its late employees.

—A hail storm occurred at Yale on the 12th inst., at which hail stones the size of hen's eggs fell in profusion for some minutes.

—At Nanaimo yesterday G. Williams, son of the late John Williams, had his arm broken below the elbow while wrestling with another lad.

—On Sunday last Geo. French and David Ricker absconded from Coal Harbor with a sail boat belonging to Messrs. Shaw & Linton, and an indebtedness of over $200 to Messrs. Blair and Brass.

—The Olympian brought freight for Jacob Sehl, A Bossi, Marvin & Tilton, W J. McDonald, Neufelder & Ross, Thos Earle, R T Williams, M W Waitt & Co, G H Maynard, John Weller.

—The sidewalk in front of Hall & Goepel's and R. Lipsett's was repaired yesterday and the job looked so rough and unbecoming that the whole sidewalk, old and new, was torn up to-day. New planks will be laid down.

—A fine of $400 was imposed on the steamer Hope by Collector Bush, of Port Townsend, which the owners paid under protest. The charges against her was with being in an American port without clearance papers.

—Letters for the following are held for postage: Mrs M E Michell, The Dalles, Or; H Croak, (G W Elder), City; Mrs A K Colburn, E Portland; Thos McNeeley, Ladner's Landing; Mrs Nicolls, Montreal.

—The P. T. Argus says: Port Angeles will celebrate the Fourth in appropriate style. Among the leading features of the affair will be a canoe race. One of the craft entered for the contest has been named "Hurrah for Beecher;" another, "Not for Joe."

—A Tacoma editor throws his castor into the air and shouts: "In no place yet visited by the Iowa editors did they find accommodation in one hotel for all their party except in Tacoma." To which a Seattle man retorts: "Very true, but Tacoma is the only place where they had to sleep more than three in a bed."

—To-morrow, Sunday, Archbishop Seghers will administer the sacrament of confirmation in St. Andrew's Cathedral, View street, and occupy the pulpit in the evening. After the evening service, the ground where the new residence is about to be built, will be solemnly blessed, in presence of the congregation.

—The brakeman Moore who was killed at Harrison river on the 16th inst., was twice run over by the train. After the cars had passed over his body the train was backed to pick him up, and so carelessly was it done that the wheels of one of the cars again passed over the body and still further mangled it.

—At a meeting in Lillooet on the 17th instant, R. Hoey, J. P., in the chair, the following resolution was proposed by A. W. Smith, seconded by R. Carson, and passed unanimously: "That we believe the Chinese Regulation Act, at present in force, is unjust and injurious to the best interests of Lillooet district, and we request our members to use their influence and have it repealed at the next meeting of the legislature."

—A big potlatch is now in progress on Discovery Island, where a very large number of Indians have congregated from the adjacent country for many miles around. The Dominion authorities will probably wink at this infraction of the law, as to attempt to rigidly enforce the new regulations would undoubtedly provoke the Indians, and might be the origin of much trouble. It is an ancient custom, deeply rooted, and it will take years before the government will succeed in convincing the "untutored savage" that he has no right to indulge in a periodical fit of generosity. In fact, before that is accomplished, our newly [illegible] brothers will have to be pretty thoroughly reconstructed.

Withdrawing from the East Coast Route.

The negotiations that have been in progress for some time between the C. P. N. Co. and the "Peoples' Line" for the withdrawal by one or the other of their steamers from the east coast route, it is understood are now all but closed. It is reported the signing of the agreements will be completed this evening. The C. P. N. Co. then will withdraw the Rithet, leaving the Amelia the route to herself. It is probable rates will be advanced slightly, but to what extent is not yet definitely known.

Died at the Nanaimo Hospital.

The Free Press says that Edward Gallagher, a native of Donegal, Ireland, aged 59 years, died at the hospital on Thursday morning. The deceased was brought up from Chemainus on Monday in a dying state. It appears that he was working on the railway and became somewhat demented. In this state he wandered into the woods and was nearly starved to death when found. From letters found on his person it is thought he leaves a wife and five children now resident at San Francisco.

Come Back to Stay.

Their many friends in Victoria, and throughout the province, will be pleased to welcome back Prof. A. L. Francis and family, the well known piano maker and tuner, who left Victoria early in May, with the intention of making Portland his future home. The professor prefers Victoria to any place he has visited since leaving, and now returns with the intention of becoming a permanent resident.

The Archbishop's Residence.

The contract for the erection of the residence for Archbishop Seghers was awarded to-day to Mr. McPhee. The amount of the tender was not ascertained, but it is understood to be somewhere between $20,000 and $25,000. There were a number of tenders put in, and the various figures, with one or two exceptions, did not vary very greatly.

THE FAVORITE GLOVE—"The Princess" in tan colors, with black, self, or fancy points, at the City House.

A Willful Untruth.

Referring to its weekly edition the Colonist of yesterday says: "It contains from one to three days later news than any other Victoria weekly. THE TIMES of Friday evening replied by stating that this statement was "a delicate untruth on a par with the 'exclusive dispatch' falsehood. We could have used a stronger expression, with which the editor of the Colonist is thoroughly familiar, for from him emanates the most colossal "lies" capable of being uttered by any one. Alluding to the matter in its issue of this morning it says: "THE TIMES' weekly edition is printed on Thursday, dated one day ahead to deceive its subscribers, and mailed the same evening. The Colonist is printed on Friday morning with the dispatches taken up to two o'clock that morning, inserted, so that it can be readily seen that untruth lies with THE TIMES and not with the Colonist."

It is quite correct that our weekly edition is printed on Thursday evening and dated Friday. This is the course adopted everywhere with first-class newspapers, such as the Toronto Globe and Mail, Montreal Gazette, Star and Witness, and the great weeklies of New York, Chicago and elsewhere. As to the assertion that the weekly edition "contains news from one to three days later than any other Victoria weekly," THE TIMES pronounces the statement a willful and deliberate falsehood, and well known to the writer to be such. THE TIMES' evening dispatches are received up to 4.30 o'clock; those for the Colonist up to 2 a. m. The last issue of the weekly Colonist contains the same dispatches as the weekly TIMES—not a moment's news or a word later. Thus we have probed another of our contemporary's bubbles, but the endeavor to keep it within the bounds of propriety, and telling the truth, is a herculean task, for no sooner is it caught in one fib than another comes to the surface. In short, the truth with the Colonist in discussing any topic is a virtue entirely unknown to that institution.

The Colonist and "Lex."

The apology for "Lex," found in this morning's Colonist, is practically a plea of guilty, and reminds one of the endorsement on a brief in a well-known case where the counsel was instructed that there was no case for the defendant, but that he was to bully the plaintiff's solicitor. This is what the Colonist has attempted to do. The shot aimed at Mr. Hett misses the mark, as that gentleman had no more to do with the annihilation of "Lex," in last night's TIMES, than had the editor of the Colonist. The next time that "Lex" quotes cases he had better bear in mind that others as well as lawyers can look up authorities. THE TIMES again reiterates that the case quoted by "Lex" is entirely inapplicable to the matter in hand, and the TIMES further informs the Colonist that Mr. Hett's residence as a lawyer and as a man of business is quite different to his residence as a voter for school trustees.

A Western Chatauqua.

For some time the question of establishing a place of resort, modelled after the Chatauqua grounds in Western Pennsylvania, has been engaging the attention of a number of public spirited gentlemen on the Sound. A few weeks ago, a committee was appointed, to whom was entrusted the responsibility of selecting the locality, raising funds and fitting up the place in a suitable manner. This committee was made up of Rev. J. A. Ward, of this city, Rev. R. B. Dilworth, of Vashon, Mr. Pierce and W. H. Reeves of Seattle. The grounds selected are located on Vashon island at Beal's point, and are now being cleared and put in good shape for the object proposed. The location is about intermediate between Tacoma and Seattle, and easily accessible from any point on the Sound. It is proposed to hold a succession of meetings, at which addresses upon moral, religious, literary and scientific subjects will be a feature. The first of these meetings will be held the first week in August, and they will continue for a period of two months during which time all parties who desire are invited to go there, where they may camp out and spend such time as they wish. The services of Rev. J. A. Ward, Dr. Nevius, Rev. McFarland, Professor Robb and others have already been secured for addresses upon different topics.

The School Picnic.

The pupils of the high school, trustees, and teachers, enjoyed themselves immensely at the picnic at Cedar Hill yesterday. The Transfer Company's large "buss "Young America" and a number of private carriages were used to convey the children to the ground, the vehicles leaving the city about 9 a.m. and returning at 8 p.m. The weather was delightful, and with an excellent luncheon, a pleasant drive and a romp in the woods and on the green, nothing was lacking to render the day a highly enjoyable one to all, both old and young. Mr. Offerhaus, Miss Jackson, Mrs. Caldwell and others instrumental in providing this entertainment, are to be congratulated on its success. The boys unanimously voted them "bricks."

Coming to Victoria.

The Queen of the Pacific, which left San Francisco for Victoria yesterday, has on board the following passengers for this city: C A Bossi and wife, Mrs Meding, Joseph Ryland, Edward Hislan, A Saph and wife, Mrs Mollineaux, A J Ferguson, Mrs McCoy, Mrs W M Colhart, J Frederick and wife and two children, Mrs Gill and son, N H Chittenden, Mrs James Williams, M Clayton and wife, J Lippett, J H Clarke, E J Hollein, F Richardson, J W Fox, L R Stockwell, Lewis Morrison, George Osborne, Miss Rosabel Morrison, Miss Anna Adams, Miss Ada Deaves, W A Brady, John Lindwick.

A Disclaimer.

Mr. Theodore Davie, deeming it necessary for the sake of his professional reputation, writes to the Colonist this morning denying that he is the author of the silly letter signed "Lex". The disclaimer was scarcely required as the letter bears internal evidence that it was the work of a "prentice hand," probably the first attempt of an unfledged student of extraordinary verdancy and unlimited self-assurance. Mr. Davie's greatest enemy would not accuse him of belonging to the callow brood of which "Lex" is a most conspicuous example.

Grand Lodge Meeting.

The most worshipful Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of British Columbia, commenced its fourteenth annual session in the Masonic Temple, this afternoon at 2 o'clock, R. W. Bro. Thomas Trounce, Deputy Grand Master, presiding. The fraternity will attend divine service tomorrow morning at St. John's church, when a special musical service appropriate to the occasion, will be rendered. Rev. Bro. Canon Dwyer, Grand Chaplain of the order, will preach on the occasion.

For San Francisco.

The Geo. W. Elder which left at noon to-day, carried the following passengers for San Francisco: J. T. Murray, R. D. Chandler, Wm. Fitzpatrick, P. Fish, G. A. Mitchell, A. Macduff, Mrs. S. A. Dockard, Major W. Downie, R. A. Thain, D. McLean, T. P. West, D. M. Lange, Loo Gee Wing, Sing Fing, J. A. McKenzie, Wee Loo Hap, Chew Chew, R. Mosley.

VICTORIA TRANSFER COMPANY.

New and Elegant Buildings Erected for the Company's Business.

The buildings of the Victoria Transfer Co., extending from Broughton to Courtenay streets, have recently been occupied and are found to be admirably adapted for the purpose. In the internal arrangements, the first consideration that the company kept in view in their erection, was convenience, and every detail of a well-appointed stable has been provided. The building facing on Broughton contains the office of the company, a sitting room for the men, a large harness room, and a commodious floor for the carriages in daily use. In the front is also situated the spacious offices of the whose ramifications extend throughout the whole province, and whose connections with other leading express companies give it facilities that are unexcelled for the transmission of articles to all parts of the continent. Baggage is now checked by this company over the O.R. & N. and N. P. R to any point in the east. In the second story of this building, there is sleeping accommodation for twenty employees, a large room for carriages and vehicles which are hoisted up by an elevator, and storage capacity for grain and provender.

IN THE BUILDING ADJOINING,

which faces on Courtenay street, there is still accommodation for one hundred horses. The second story is also provided with stalls, a hay loft, and convenient arrangements for feeding, removing manure, etc. The buildings are supplied with water in every part, so that the labor of cleaning vehicles and horses and watering the latter is reduced to a minimum. In addition there are twelve roomy box stalls. This company, we were informed, are boarding horses at the remarkably low price of $15 per month. The stock now in the stables have been raised by the company on where they have a band of three hundred or four hundred horses, and from which they draw supplies when they find it necessary to replenish their stock of horses in the city. These stables, both in point of size and general equipment, are a credit to the city, and are not excelled by similar institutions in any other city of the size on this western coast. The company do a general hack and livery business, and the erection of these premises was found absolutely necessary to meet the requirements of its enormously increased trade, which under the efficient management of Mr. F. Barnard is certain to assume even greater proportions.

He came over the trail with the mail carrier, making the trip from Alberni to the mouth of the Qualicum in five hours, a distance of 21 miles, and from thence on the steamer Daisy to Nanaimo. He will return to Alberni in about two weeks time with his family.

Mr. Mollet has finished his contract for completing the Lawson road. A line has been surveyed for a road from Mr. P. Merrifield's to the salt water, but as the road will have to run through an Indian reserve, Mr. Smith is the bearer of a petition signed by forty of the settlers, asking for permission to go through the reserve.

From Mr. Smith we learn that the weather has been fine and warm, the thermometer on Friday last registering 95 in the shade. The steam schooner Dolphin with a good supply of merchandise for the B. C. Fishing Co.'s store, has arrived, and Mr. McQuillan, the popular manager, is kept busy supplying the wants of the many settlers.

Mr. Smith has taken up a claim for himself and brother on the shore of Sproat's Lake, but has been very busy surveying the locations of the settlers.

Baldwin Theater Co. in "Shadows."

The San Francisco Bulletin says of "Shadows of a Great City" as played by the Baldwin Theater Co.: "The play is a strong one, and has the superior merit of consive acting, a reasonable amount of characters, in place of a score of do-nothings as in most melo dramas, and directness in plot and climax, it is well written and deals with home characters, and has the most desirable quality of captivating the upper tiers as well as interesting the dress circle.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

(While the columns of THE TIMES are open for the discussion of questions of public interest, to correspondents, it must be understood that it does not necessarily endorse, nor coincide with, the sentiments expressed by writers in this column.)

Denial from Mr. J. Roland Hett.

To THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—Please be good to state in your paper the following facts, namely: That I have not written anything respecting the school trustee election; have not on the subject; and have not formed any legal opinion upon the construction of the new School Act. Yours truly,

Riel Quite Sane.

Dr. Orton, M. P., brigade surgeon with Gen. Middleton, has arrived in Ottawa. In an interview he said that Col. Grissett, of the Grenadiers, and he had an interview with Riel, who is quite sane and even a clever man. Riel talked eagerly about the political situation, and appeared to take a keen interest in the progress of affairs at Ottawa, and was especially inquisitive as to the terms of the Franchise bill. His conduct betrayed no sign of insanity, and the unanimous opinion of all classes in the Northwest was that he should hang without unnecessary delay. The doctor speaks highly of the bravery shown by the wounded in their severe sufferings.

Accession Day.

On the 20th of June, 1837, forty-eight years ago to-day, Queen Victoria succeeded to the throne on the death of William IV. The anniversary of the event is celebrated at all naval stations by the firing of a royal salute, and at noon to-day the guns of the men-of-war at Esquimalt were plainly heard in honor of the event. "Long may she reign."

PHILIP VAN TASEL, Newark, N. Y., suffered for many years from dyspepsia and malassimilation of food, and reports that he derived greater benefit from Warner's TIPPECANOE The Best, than from any other medicine he ever used. His daughter also used it with success when every other known remedy failed.

W. K. SAGE, of St. Johns, Mich., was completely prostrated by the hardships endured during the late war. He returned home a wreck both in mind and body. For twenty years he simply existed, half the time more dead than alive until he was restored to health by Warner's TIPPECANOE The Best. He advises all vets to try it.
